

August 12, 2011

For more information:
NDDOT Communications, (701) 328-4444

Looking for public input on enhanced NDDOT Travel Information Map

The North Dakota Department of Transportation (NDDOT) is currently testing several new features on its Travel Information Map and is interested in getting public input. The enhanced travel map has a wider variety of options to view. The additional features will allow people to get more road information at one time, helping motorists stay more informed about statewide road conditions.

To access and use the new map, go to dot.nd.gov and click on Enhanced Travel Information Map at the top of the page.

Enhanced features to the map include:

- The ability to zoom in on specific regions, cities, areas and state highway
- A message center providing important road condition information to motorists
- The option of viewing road conditions for opposite directions of travel on divided four lane roads
- Current wind speeds
- Direct links to travel information from surrounding states

The NDDOT would like to encourage the public to use the map and send feedback about the enhanced Travel Information Map to dot@nd.gov. Comments about the enhanced map will be taken through September 9, 2011.